The agreement between the British Government and the Representatives of Southern Ireland in respect of the establishment of an Irish Free State, was signed in the early hours of December 6th, 1921, a few days after the last edition of "Debrett" passed to press. This agreement, duly ratified by the Imperial Parliament, was confirmed by Dail Eireann on January 6th, 1922, and ratified by the Provisional Parliament of Southern Ireland a few days later on January 14th. The Constitution of the Free State has now been framed, and as soon as this has been implemented by the Imperial Parliament, several points for adjustment may arise, in respect of such matters for instance as the Peerage of Ireland and the status in the House of Lords of the Elected Representative Peers for Ireland, who—unlike those for Scotland elected for the period of one Parliament only—were elected for life, also, it may be, in connection with the "of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" words of the Royal style and title, the Coronation Oath and the Oath of Allegiance, the Royal Arms and the Royal Standard (in which the third quarter is representative of Ireland), the Union Jack (into which the Cross of St. Patrick was incorporated in 1806), etc. etc. The Irish Free State (Consequential Provisions) Act will provide for the establishment of a Privy Council for Northern Ireland.

The Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords has again had a busy time, and very interesting indeed have been some of the cases brought before it. The petition of the Viscountess Rhondda based on the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Act 1916, to receive a Writ of Summons to the House of Lords as a Peeress in her own right, was favourably reported upon on March 2nd, 1922, and would also have benefited many other Peeresses in their own right, but later, on the 30th of the same month, the report of the Committee was, after an interesting debate in the House of Lords, referred back to the Committee for Privileges on the motion of the then Lord Chancellor, for further consideration and for the presentation of additional arguments which had not been put before the Committee previously, after this second hearing the Committee by a majority rejected the petition, the judgment indicating that the terms of the Patent of creation precluded the petitioner from receiving a Writ of Summons, on the ground that while it gives to males "a seat, place and voice in the Parliaments, and Public Assemblies and Councils," it by silence denies it when referring to females, and that the above mentioned Act did not remove the disqualification. The report was agreed to by the House of Lords.

In "

the Dame Selina Frances Douglas Gordon that

a part), also resulted in favour of the petitioner. Further, on the 10th of that month, the Committee reported in respect of the claim of Major John William Rivallon de Poher de la Poer (Count De La Poer) to the Barony of Le Power and Coroghmore in the Peerage of Ireland (creation 1535), that the outlawry of John Power for high treason 1691 still subsisted, that there was no corruption of blood affecting the petitioner, and that, but for the outlawry of his ancestor, he would be entitled to succeed to the Barony, to reverse the outlawry an Act of Parliament would be necessary. The Committee also granted the application of the 5th Lord Huntingfield (after proof of pedigree) for right to vote at the election of Representative Peers for Ireland.

Among other claims that have still to be heard, are the petitions of the Countess of Loudoun to the Earldom of Warwick and the Baronies of Montacute and Pole of Montagu, and of Viscountess St Davids to the Earldom of Salisbury and the Baronies of Montagu and Monthermer, and by Col Ulric Oliver Thynne, CMG, DSO, as a co-heir, to the Barony of Beauchamp de Somerset (creation by Writ)—all for determination of abeyance.

November 15th, 1922, saw the centenary of the death (which took place at Upper Grosvenor Street) of John Debrett, the one time publisher of Piccadilly, whose name is so intimately connected with this publication—the original of the series now bearing his name (to which the most recent recruit is "DEBRETT'S CITY OF LONDON BOOK"), it is curious that this coincides with the migration of the offices of Debrett from their former home for so many years in Fleet Street, westward to Debrett House, 29, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C., at a point nearer to the address, opposite Burlington House, connected with the early activities of John Debrett himself, to which location he removed, in accordance with the following quaint advertisement which appeared in the St James's Chronicle, or British Evening Post, dated "From Tuesday July 11th to July 13th, 1780" —

"JOHN DEBRETT begs leave most respectfully to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry, and his readers in general, that he is removed from the late Mr William Davis's, the Corner of Sackville Street, to Mr Almon's, Bookseller and Stationer, Opposite Burlington House in Piccadilly, where he hopes he shall be honoured with their Commands, so long as he shall be found by a diligent and faithful Attention, to deserve the Favour of their Countenance and Protection."

Towards the end of the 1st Parliament the question of its reform was again before the House of Lords, but nothing definite has yet transpired, the matter will no doubt, however, later on come under the consideration of the new Government.

Once again was revived the question of the method of the bestowal of honours, with the result that a Royal Commission has been appointed, and its report is expected to become available before the next list of Honours is announced. In view of the wide discussion that has taken place on the subject, a comparative statement as to the new names added to the Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage during the past 65 years, as recorded from year to year in "Debrett," will doubtless prove of interest

The report was agreed to by the House of Lords.

In March a claim by Dame Selina Frances Bewicke Copley that the abeyance of the ancient Barony of Cromwell (creation by Writ 1375) might be terminated in her favour as one of the co-heirs was heard, and the Committee reported in accordance with the petition, on the same day a claim by Bernard Henry St. John, to be Viscount Bolingbroke and Viscount St. John, Baron St. John of 1 ydiard 1 regoze, and Baron St. John of 1 atterser, as the only legitimate son and heir of the 5th Viscount Bolingbroke (a case in which certain "Debrett" records played a part), also resulted in favour of the petitioner. Further, on the 10th of that month, the Committee reported in respect of the claim of Major John William Rivillon de Poher de la Poer (Count De La Poer) to the Barony of Le Power and Coroghmore in the Peerage of Ireland (creation 1535), that the outlawry of John Power for high treason 1691 still subsisted, that there was no corruption of blood affecting the petitioner, and that, but for the outlawry of his ancestor, he would be entitled to succeed to the Barony, to reverse the outlawry an Act of Parliament would be necessary. These figures cover fifteen Administrations, those of Benjamin Disraeli (later Earl of Beaconsfield) two, William Ewart Gladstone four, Marquess of Salisbury three, Earl of Rosebery one, Arthur James Balfour one, Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman one, Herbert Henry Asquith two (one War Coalition), and David Lloyd George one (Coalition), but it must be borne in mind that the figures given do not take any account of steps or promotions in the Peerage, each of which also creates a new dignity (of which the last two Administrations, those of Mr Asquith and Mr Lloyd George, are together responsible for over forty), or of promotions to higher grades of the Orders of Knighthood.

Under date of December 1st, 1921, the certificate of naturalization granted to

Barred the Privy Council
Sir Edgar Speyer,
Bt, in 1892 was revoked, and it was further directed that his wife Leonora, and his minor children, Pamela, Leonora, and Vivien Clare should cease to be British subjects, while on December 13th, 1921 by Order in Council, his name was struck off the list of His Majesty's Privy Council. Both notices appeared in the Gazette of December 13th 1921, they do not, however, directly affect the Baronetcy conferred upon Sir Edgar Speyer in 1906, which still remains on the official Roll of the Baronetage.

In the course of last year Viscount French of Ypres was nominated to an Earldom, but it was not until more than twelve months later, in June, 1922, that the Earldom was officially gazetted, by the title of Earl of Ypres. By adopting this title the Field Marshal continues to associate himself on his promotion to the Earldom, with one of the principal battle grounds of the late War, where he himself took so prominent a part while commanding the British Expeditionary Force 1914-15.

A most unusual occurrence happened this year, when a new Peerage, duly gazetted under one title, was a few days later regazetted by an entirely different one (that of the family name), for when Robert Borwick, Bt was raised to the Peerage in January, his Patent was first gazetted as Baron Esthwaite, the title being quickly altered to Baron Borwick, by which he is now known

Unusual
Change of Title

Since the death of Queen Victoria in 1901, no fresh appointments have been made to the Order of Victoria and Albert, which in memory of her husband, Prince Albert, she instituted in 1862, exclusively for ladies, and although it consists of four classes, the dwindling number of living recipients of the Order, indicates its total extinction in the not far distant future

A dwindling
Order

As Capt Gordon Hargreaves Brown, Coldstream Guards, who was killed in action in France in 1914, would, had he survived his father, have succeeded to the Baronetcy of Broom Hall (creation 1903), His Majesty has conferred on his widow the style, title and precedence of the widow of a Baronet, similar Warrants having already been issued in several like cases in connection with deaths which occurred during the late War

Special
again

Among the honours conferred in the past twelve months was the bestowal, on his return from the Disarmament Conference at Washington, of an Earldom with a special remainder, upon the Rt Hon Sir Arthur James Balfour, K G, O M, who had a short time previously been made a Knight of the Garter. Although there have, of course, been many other Commoners made Knights of the Garter—notably in recent years the present Viscount Grey of Fallodon, who, as Sir Edward Grey, Bt, became K G in 1912—the Earl of Balfour is probably the first person to be so created whose usual appellation was at the time of creation merely "Mr," for, with the exception of Sir Edward Grey, Bt, singled out for the honour in 1912, no such appointment had been made since the days of Sir Robert Walpole, and previous to that (with the exception of certain eldest sons of Peers holding courtesy titles) the reign of King Charles II is reached before a similar case is again found, when General Monck and Admiral Montagu each received the Garter, likewise just before being raised to the Peerage

Last year the nonagenarian 3rd Earl of Ducie was succeeded by his octogenarian brother from Queensland, now there is another nonagenarian recruit to the Peerage in the person of the successor to the Viscountcy of Exmouth, this new Peer, who succeeded in the 95th year of his age, is at present resident in the U S A and a naturalized American citizen

This year's Obituary contains the names of two eminent and aged members of the legal profession, both of whom passed away within a few days of each other, Lord Lindley (a Life Peer), aged 93 who was the last of the English Serjeants at law having the right to wear the coif, and the Earl of Halsbury (Lord High Chancellor 1885 to 1886, 1886 to 1892, and 1895 to 1905) at the ripe age of 98

As long ago as 1880 the following paragraph appeared in the Preface to "Debrett" — "It is happily exceptional for more than four baptismal names to be given to infants" These words were inspired by the fact that record was made in "Debrett" that in one family 10 children bore 1 em 90 Christian names, four of the youngsters being respectively burdened with 16 16 15 and 13. Now a member of another family has given his child nine Christian names, but it is to be hoped that for the sake of brevity and in view of the present high cost of printing, the practice will not spread further.

Many and curious are the letters and requests received in the course of editing a book like "Debrett, and so far as possible all legitimate enquiries are replied to but there are limits, Unreasonable Requests and when a request takes the form of asking for the very particulars given in the book itself and for the purpose of supplying which the volume is produced at great expense—such, for instance as a request to supply to a string of names the dates of death of the individuals mentioned 'for my autograph book' to furnish some particular fact on the ground that 'it is the only occasion on which such information is likely to be required' or to prepare fresh proof and send it overseas for my little boy's collection—then the line must be drawn, as it is neither fair to the Publishers nor to the Editor.

It is particularly requested that as many addresses as possible of those referred to in the volume should be furnished with Your Address Please! a view to maintaining the accuracy of the volume for changes of residence still go on apace, and it is often difficult to keep in touch with those referred to.

Many and various are the uses Debrett may be put to and the questions it will answer but it is a matter of wonder as to what What was it? knotty point it was that caused a navy reclining in a wheelbarrow apart from his fellows to be seen recently in a well known public thoroughfare, diligently studying a copy of Debrett's Peerage during the lunch interval.

In addition to the Balfour Earldom mentioned above new Honours that come within the scope of 'Debrett' have been announced in the Twelve Months Honours course of the past twelve months as follows: 4 Peers have received promotion (Viscount Birkenhead and Viscount Farquhar each to an Earldom and Lord Lee of Fareham and Lord Leverhulme each to a Viscounty) 13 Baronies* have been added to the Roll of the House of Lords 6 Peerages† becoming extinct 29 Members‡ have been sworn of the Privy Council of either

A Peerage was declined by Sir Joseph Benjamin Robinson, 1st Bt (d 1908), whose name appeared among the Birthday Honours.

The number of new Honours that have been conferred from Dec 1st, 1921 to Nov 30th, 1922, exceeds 500, without taking into account a large number of promotions in the various Orders of Knighthood or of any appointments to classes ranked in the scale of Precedence below that of Members of the Victorian Order (4th class). Any corrections or additions which will add to the accuracy or completeness of "Debrett" are much appreciated, and to all those correspondents who have been good enough to reply to enquiries addressed to them during the past few months, and especially to those Officers of Arms who have furnished information, I am much indebted for the help afforded in preparing the present volume, but correspondents should bear in mind that wholesale excisions of material dates or of facts, which in the nature of things cannot possibly have altered since they were recorded, cannot be made, otherwise the value and usefulness of "Debrett" as a standard work of reference could not possibly be sustained

Thanks, and a Reminder

REGISTRAR—Thomas Ulack Bulleir, Esq, M A, M R I A

HERALDS TO THE ORDER OF ST PATRICK

Dublin—Major Guillemore O Grady, M A

Cork—Capt Richard Alexander Lyonel Keith

TABLES OF GENERAL PRECEDENCE.

PRECEDENCE of Ladies is always derived from the father or husband, except in the case of a Peeress in her own right

Official precedence, such as that of the Great Officers of State, confers no corresponding precedence on their wives or daughters

The wives and issue of Archbishops and Bishops at present have no special precedence as such

A Dowager Peeress, or Baronetess, while a widow, by custom, takes precedence of the wife of the incumbent of the title

The children of a living Peer, or Baronet, have precedence above the children of the previous possessor or possessors, of the title.

If the daughter of a Peer marries a Peer she takes her husband's rank, but if she marry the eldest or younger son of a Peer she ranks either according to her own inherent precedence (i.e., as the daughter of her father), or according to that of her husband (i.e., as the wife of the eldest or younger son of a Duke, Marquess, Earl, etc.), whichever happens to be the higher, no matter what the courtesy title may be

To Foreign Ambassadors modern practice concedes precedence immediately after the Royal Family, while to Foreign Ministers and Envoys place is usually allowed after Dukes and before Marquesses

Foreign Titles of Nobility borne by British subjects afford their holders no precedence whatever in this country, and strictly speaking a Royal License should be obtained for their use

* Taking precedence among themselves according to the dates of their husbands' creation as Knights or appointment as Senators of the College of Justice, respectively.

† This precedence was local, and did not extend beyond the precincts of the City, the Viceregal Lodge not being within them.

‡ By Royal Ordinance of March, 1834, and Royal Warrant of December, 1902, Archbishops of the Church of Ireland, and Roman Catholic Church in Ireland, and the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland were ranked inter se, according to the dates of consecration or translation as Archbishops, or election in the case of the Moderator.

§ In Ireland the Prelates of the Church of Ireland and of the Roman Catholic Church (ranking among themselves in seniority of consecration or translation) were accorded the same precedence as that of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Established Church of Ireland before the passing of the Irish Church Act in 1869.

FOREIGN MEDALS (IN ORDER OF DATE OF AWARD)

As regards Orders the above applies to those Orders of similar grades. When the miniature or riband of a higher grade of a junior Order is worn with that of the lower grade of a senior Order the higher grade miniature or riband should come first—e.g. the miniature or riband of a K C I E will come before a C B and a G C M G before a K C B.

* The Order of Merit is worn round the neck on all occasions but never in miniature.
† The Indian Order of Merit (Military and Civil) is distinct from the Order of Merit instituted in 1902.
‡ King George's Durbar Medal in Gold can be worn in the United Kingdom by Ruling Chiefs of India only.

WEARING OF ORDERS, DECORATIONS, AND MEDALS IN MORNING DRESS.

ALL members of the various Orders of Knighthood, etc., and all persons who have been awarded Decorations and Medals may, should they wish to do so, wear their Insignia, Decorations, and Medals with morning dress on Official Occasions and at Public Functions.

The Ribbons of the Orders, Decorations, and Medals may be worn on all occasions at the discretion of the holder.

The method of wearing the Insignia of Orders, also Decorations and Medals, on Official Occasions and at Public Functions with morning dress is as follows —

Knights Grand Cross Knights Grand Commanders Dames Grand Cross Knights Commanders Dames Commanders	}	Should wear the Star only on the left breast of the Coat or in a corresponding place on the dress, as the case may be

Members of the Order of Merit Men who are Members of the Order of the Companions of Honour Companions of the several Orders of Knighthood Commanders of the Royal Victorian Order Men who are Commanders of the Order of the British Empire	}	Should wear the ribbon to which the Badge is suspended under the tie, which should be a bow , the badge hanging about three-quarters of an inch below the bow.
---	---	---

Women who are Members of the Order of the Companions of Honour Companions of the Distinguished Service Order Members of the 4th Class of the Royal Victorian Order Officers of the Order of the British Empire Companions of the Imperial Service Order Members of the 5th Class of the Royal Victorian Order Members of the Order of the British Empire Persons who have been decorated with — The Victoria Cross The Royal Red Cross The Distinguished Service Cross The Military Cross The Distinguished Flying Cross The Air Force Cross Persons who have been awarded medals	}	Should wear the Badges, Decorations, and Medals on the left breast of the coat, or in a corresponding place on the dress, as the case may be

The method of wearing the ribbons of Orders, Decorations, and Medals, which will be the same in all cases, both for men and women, is as follows —

A piece of the ribbon one and a half inches wide, or the width of the medal ribbon, and half an inch in depth, mounted on a bar of metal in the form of a brooch, to be worn on the left breast of the coat, or in a corresponding place on the dress, as the case may be.

NOTE — The above intimation only refers to Morning Dress and does not alter the regulations with regard to wearing Orders, Decorations, and Medals with Uniform, or with Evening Dress.

TITLES, ORDERS, AND DEGREES

PRECEDENCE AND DIGNITY.

ROYAL CROWN * (AS HERALDICALLY DEPICTED).

THE SOVEREIGN.

FIRST, in honour and dignity, as in power—indeed, the seat and fountain of all three—is the Sovereign, who possesses, according to Camden,

"Many rights and privileges peculiar to majesty, termed by the learned lawyers sacra sacrorum, that is, sacred and individual, inseparable because they cannot be severed, and the ordinary royal prerogatives, termed the flowers of his crown, in which respect they affirm that the regal material crown is adorned with flowers. Some of these are held by positive or written law, others which, by right of custom, by a silent consent of all men without law, prescription of time has allowed, the king justly enjoys."

The Crown is held under the Act of Succession (12 and 13 William III., cap. 2), the wording of which, with reference to succession, is—

"For default of issue of the said Princess Ann and of His Majesty respectively the crown and regal government of the said kingdoms of England France and Ireland and of the dominions thereunto belonging with the royal state and dignity of the said realms and all honours styles titles regalties prerogatives powers jurisdictions and authorities to the same belonging and appertaining shall be remain and continue to the said most excellent Princess Sophia (of Hanover) and the heirs of her body being Protestants."

Among the more clearly defined prerogatives of the British monarch are those of convoking, adjourning, removing, and dissolving Parliament, refusing assent to Bills, without which assent they cannot become law, increasing the number of Peers, declaring war at pleasure, choosing and appointing all commanders and officers by land and sea, and all judges, councillors, officers of state, magistrates, Archbishops, Bishops, and high ecclesiastical dignitaries, bestowing all public honours, and pardoning criminals, besides exercis-

* The heraldic crown is depicted as above, and shows only half the fleur-de-lis on the rim as well as a crimson cap, whereas the crown of the actual State Crown is of purple. In 1893 Her late Majesty Queen Victoria commanded an Imperial State Crown to be made for her Coronation and State occasions of a design entirely different to the above illustration, with jewels taken from old crowns and others furnished. It consisted of diamonds, pearls, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds set in silver and gold, it had a crimson velvet cap with ermine border and was lined with white silk. Its gross weight was 37 oz. 5 dwts. troy. The lower part of the band, above the ermine border, consisted of a row of 139 pearls, and the upper part of the band of a row of 112 pearls, between which in front of the crown was a large sapphire (partly drilled) purchased for the crown by King George IV. At the back was a sapphire of smaller size, and 6 other sapphires (three on each side) between which 8 emeralds. Above and below the seven sapphires were 24 diamonds and around the eight emeralds 128 diamonds. Between the emeralds and the sapphires were 18 relief ornaments containing 16 diamonds. Above the band were 8 sapphires, surmounted by 9 diamonds, between which were 8 girdle stones consisting of 148 diamonds. In the front of the crown, and in the centre of a diamond cross-patée was the famous ruby said to have been given to Edward Prince of Wales, son of Edward III., called the Black Prince, by Don Pedro King of Castile after the battle of Nájera near Victoria A.D. 1367. This ruby was worn in the helmet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt A.D. 1415. It is pierced quite through, after the Eastern custom, the upper part of the piercing being filled up by a small ruby. Around this ruby in order to form the cross were 75 brilliant diamonds. Three other crosses-patée forming the two sides and back of the crown, had emerald centres and contained respectively 132 and 134 brilliant diamonds. Between the four crosses-patée were four ornaments in the form of the French fleur-de-lis, with 4 rubies in the centres and surrounded by rose diamonds containing respectively 85, 86, and 87 rose diamonds. From the crosses-patée issued four inner arches composed of oak leaves and acorns, the leaves contained 728 rose, able, and brilliant diamonds; 32 pearls form the acorns set in cups containing 54 rose diamonds and one table diamond. The total number of diamonds in the arches and acorns was 108 brilliant, 116 table, and 559 rose diamonds. From the upper part of the arches were suspended four large pendant pear-shaped pearls, with rose diamond cups, containing 22 rose diamonds and stems containing 24 very small rose diamonds. Above the arch stood the mosaic containing in the lower hemispheres 204 brilliant and in the upper 244 brilliant, the rose and arc being composed of 33 rose diamonds. The cross on the summit had a rose cut sapphire in the centre surrounded by 4 large brilliants and 108 smaller brilliants. Summary of jewels turned over in this crown—One large ruby, irregularly polished, one large broadspread sapphire, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 1,363 brilliant diamonds, 1,773 rose diamonds, 147 table diamonds, 4 drop-shaped pearls, and 373 pearls. For the Coronation of King Edward VII. this Imperial State Crown was refitted and lightened (the smaller weight 399½ carats) of the two larger portions of the Cullinan diamond presented by the Transvaal Colony, being subsequently added in detachable form immediately above the ermine band; the sapphire being now placed at the back. That for the Queen Consort was composed entirely of diamonds set in silver, had eight arches and contained the famous Koh-i-noor (or Mountain of Light) diamond as its central jewel. These crowns must not be confused with St. Edward's crown the official crown of England which is only in evidence at a Coronation. The Imperial Crowns are refitted for each Sovereign and are liable to be altered in design at arrangement. The special Imperial Crown used by King George V. at the Delhi Durbar 1911, and now among the Regalia at the Tower of London, cost £60,000, and is composed of eight arches and four crosses-patée with four fleurs-de-lis between the whole, surmounted by an orb bearing another cross-patée. Some 6,700 diamonds were employed in its manufacture and on the bandeau are 16 clusters, 4 of emeralds and diamonds alternating with 4 of sapphires and diamonds between each being clusters of brilliants. The centre cluster contains an especially fine Indian emerald weighing 24 carats. † A limitation which appears to denote however remote the contingency, the possibility of abeyance ing many other powers, by the advice of the Cabinet Ministers, who, however, alone are responsible, the theory of English law being that the Sovereign cannot commit wrong.

Another theory of our law is that the King (or Queen) never dies—substantially, that the throne is never vacant, the succession of the heir being instantaneous and a meeting of the Privy Council is held immediately after the Demise of the Crown (usually the next day) to give directions for proclaiming the new Sovereign and to swear in the members of the new Privy Council the proclamation taking place in London at St. James's Palace, Charing Cross Temple Bar, and Royal Exchange, two or three days later. To this first meeting of the Privy Council of the new Reign, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen etc., of London, although not themselves Privy Counsellors, are invited. Since the Reform Act Parliament does not dissolve at the Demise of the Crown, and if at the time adjourned or prorogued meets immediately, or if dissolved, the old Parliament must meet at once and may serve for six months. The ceremony of a coronation is therefore merely a solemn recognition and confirmation of the royal descent, and consequent right of accession, and is not necessary for the security of the title to the crown. It is, however, highly essential, inasmuch as it tends to a formal establishment of those rights which the people claim from the monarch in return for the duty and allegiance they are bound to observe towards the new Sovereign.

CORONATION The date of the coronation is approximately fixed and proclaimed in London at the same places as the accession some months before the ceremony itself takes place, and a special Commission is appointed to hear and determine petitions and claims in connection therewith.

The coronation ceremonial is probably more splendid emblematic, and elaborate in England than in any other country. Instance the anointing with oil, poured into the golden anointing spoon from the Ampulla or Golden Eagle, a practice which has been continued upwards of one thousand years—the formal crowning (the Royal or St. Edward's crown being carried in the initial procession immediately in front of the Sovereign between the orb on the right and the sceptre with dove on the left) the several religious ceremonies, besides the insignia of royalty, among which regalia are a ruby ring to signify faithfulness, the Armillæ, or bracelets (not now used), for good works—purple robes, to attract reverence, and a diadem, to blazon glory, also the Orb (a golden sphere enriched with jewels and surmounted by a cross, the whole being some eleven inches in height) the emblem of sovereignty, two sceptres (Royal Sceptre with the Cross—in which is now set the larger of the two greater portions of the Star of Africa—diamond, and weighing 516½ carats—and the Sceptre with the Dove) four swords—all carried upright—(the Sword of State in scabbard two handed, borne in front of St. Edward's Crown, the Sword of Mercy, or Curtana (without point), carried between on the left the Sword of Justice to the Spirituality (obtusely pointed), and on the right the Sword of Justice to the Temporality (sharp pointed), the golden spurs (prick spurs) borne in front of Curtana, between on the right St. Edward's Staff (with an orb at the end of it) and on the left the Sceptre with the Cross. [For fuller description of the Regalia see 'DEBRET'S CORONATION GUIDE']

Finally, the principal features of the Coronation Ceremony (occupying about four hours) which on each successive occasion closely follows former precedent, are as follows. The Sovereign (and Consort) accompanied by the members of the Royal Family, go to Westminster Abbey (see rough plan) and the Regalia and other emblems being all ready prepared there, and having been handed to those who are to bear them, the King robes in crimson robes and wearing a Cap of Lute, and the Queen Consort in purple and wearing a circlet of gold walk in procession with those carrying the regalia, and proceed through the west door. Being received with an Anthem, they go through the Choir, up the stairs to the Theatre, passing by their Thrones (1 and 2)—a series of raised steps—that on the right of five steps for the Sovereign, that on the left a smaller one of three steps for the Consort, surmounted by Chairs of State. [This Theatre, or elevated platform, is erected under the lantern and between the north and south transepts of the Abbey.] They then kneel at faldstools, set before Chairs of State (3) on the south side of the Altar. The Archbishop of Canterbury first recites the Recognition form at each of the four sides—east, south, west, and north—of the Theatre, turning to each of these four directions, the Sovereign meanwhile standing up also turning and showing himself to the people at every of the four sides of the Theatre, and the people assembled replying with "God save King—(or Queen —)", the trumpets then sound. The Bible, Chalice, and Paten having now been placed on the Altar, those carrying the Regalia (except the Swords) deliver them up, to be also placed upon the Altar. The Litany is then sung by two Bishops, vested in copes and kneeling at a faldstool (4) in the middle of the east side of the Theatre, the ante Communion Service is next recited and a short sermon preached. The Sovereign, when a King (having uncovered during the Litany) here resumes his Cap of State, wearing it to the end of the sermon, while the Bishop of Durham and the Peers carrying the Swords stand on the Sovereign's right hand the Bishop of Bath and Wells and the Lord Great Chamberlain being on the left, the two Bishops supporting the Queen Consort stand on either side of her. The Archbishop of Canterbury sits during the sermon in a purple velvet Chair on the north side of the Altar, other Bishops near him, on the south side near the Altar sit the Dean of Westminster and other Bishops taking part in the service and the Prebendaries of Westminster. The Coronation Oath is now administered by the Archbishop, then the Sovereign rising, and assisted by the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Sword of State being carried before him goes to the Altar, and uncovered, takes the Oath, laying the right hand upon the Holy Gospel in the Great Bible previously carried in the procession, and now tendered to the Sovereign kneeling upon the steps the Sovereign then returns to the Chair (5). The Sovereign having arisen from devotion is disrobed of the Crimson robe by the Lord Great Chamberlain, and, having taken off the Cap of State, goes before the Altar and sits down in King Edward's Chair (5), placed with a faldstool before it in the midst of the area, and is there anointed, in the form of a cross, on the crown of the head, the breast and the palms of both hands, four Knights of the Garter holding a rich silken pall over the Sovereign's head. The Anointing is performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, dipping his fingers into the Holy Oil, poured by the Dean of Westminster into the golden Anointing Spoon from the Ampulla or Golden Eagle. The Sovereign then kneels at the faldstool while the Archbishop says a blessing. The Sovereign next sits once again in King Edward's Chair, the Knights of the Garter returning the full to the Lord Chamberlain. Now, after the Anointing the Dean of Westminster places upon the Sovereign the Colobrium Sindonis, followed by the Supertunica together with the Girdle. The Great Golden Spurs, or Prick Spurs brought from the Altar by the Dean of Westminster, are delivered to the Lord Great Chamberlain who kneels down and touches the Sovereign's heels with them. These Spurs having been returned to the Altar, the Sword of State is now exchanged for another Sword in purple velvet scabbard, placed by the Archbishop upon the Altar, the Sword of State being thereupon deposited in the traverse in St Edward's Chapel, the Archbishop then takes the Sword in purple scabbard from the Altar, places it in the right hand of the Sovereign, the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of London and Winchester, and other Bishops assisting. The Sovereign is afterwards girt with same, and prayer having been said, ungirds the Sword proceeds to the Altar, and offers it in its scabbard, returning to King Edward's Chair. The Sword is at once redeemed for a sum of money (one hundred shillings) and is thenceforward carried naked in front of the Sovereign during the rest of the Ceremony. Investiture with the Armil or Stole and with the Imperial Mantle or Pall of Cloth of Gold, delivered by the Master of the Robes to the Dean of Westminster, and by him put upon the Sovereign standing, then follows, the clasps being fastened by the Lord Great Chamberlain. The Sovereign once again sitting down, receives the Orb (brought from the Altar by the Dean of Westminster) into his right hand from the Archbishop, and after a blessing and exhortation the Orb is returned to the Altar. The Keeper of the Jewel House next delivers to the Archbishop the Ruby Ring which the Archbishop places upon the fourth finger of the Sovereign's right hand. A right hand glove having been presented by the Lord of the Manor of Worktop, the Archbishop delivers the Sceptre with the Cross into the Sovereign's right hand and the Sceptre with the Dove into the Sovereign's left hand, both having been brought from the Altar by the Dean of Westminster. [The Lord of the Manor of Worktop may now support the Sovereign's right arm.] Standing before the Altar, the Archbishop of Canterbury having consecrated the official Crown of England (known as St Edward's) and assisted by other Bishops, comes from the Altar, the Dean of Westminster carrying the Crown, the Archbishop taking it and reverently placing it upon the Sovereign's head (the Sovereign still sitting in King Edward's Chair), when all the people shout, "God Save the King (or Queen). The Peers and Kings of Arms put on their coronets, the trumpets sound and the great guns at the Tower boom. Being now crowned, and having been presented by the Dean of Westminster with the Holy Bible, delivered back by the Sovereign to the Archbishop, the Sovereign, after the Benediction, goes back to the Theatre to the Throne (1) and is lifted up into it by the Archbishops, Bishops, and other Peers, and being Inthronized is surrounded by the Great Officers of State and the Nobles who carry the Regalia, standing on the steps of the Throne while the Archbishop says the Exhortation. Homage is next rendered, first by the Archbishop, who having knelt down before His Majesty's knees (the rest of the Bishops kneeling in their places) kisses the King's left cheek, then the Prince of Wales (even if a minor), having removed his Coronet, kneels down and does Homage followed by the Princes of the Blood Royal, who each, arising, touches the Crown on the Sovereign's head and kisses the Sovereign's left cheek. The other Peers, then putting off their Coronets, do their homage rank by rank, kneeling in their places, only the Senior of each rank for himself and for his Order, actually kneeling before the Sovereign, touching the Crown, and kissing the left cheek. This Homage ended the drums beat and the trumpets sound, and the people then shout, "God Save King ——— (or Queen ———)!" Long live King ——— (or Queen ———)!" May the King (or Queen) live for ever!"

The Coronation of the Sovereign now being completed, that of the Queen Consort follows.

Supported by two Bishops, she kneels at the steps of the Altar, while prayer is said, then passes to the place of Anointing, a faldstool set between the Altar steps and King Edward's Chair. (6) There she is anointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury on the crown of the head, while four Peeresses hold a rich Pall of Cloth of Gold over her, has a ring placed upon the fourth finger of her right hand as a seal of sincere faith, and a Crown reverently placed on her head by the Archbishop of Canterbury (at this point the Peeresses put on their Coronets), the Archbishop then puts a Sceptre with the Cross into her right hand and the Ivory Rod with the Dove into her left hand, after which she proceeds to an Ascension of her Throne (2) bowing to the Sovereign in passing.

Having now delivered their Sceptres to the Peers who previously bore them the Sovereign and Consort descend from their Thrones, go to the steps of the Altar, take off their Crowns which they deliver to the Lord Great Chamberlain and others appointed to hold them. Kneel down the Sovereign offering Bread and Wine and making an oblation (a Pall or Altar Cloth delivered by the Officer of the Great Wardrobe to the Lord Great Chamberlain, and by him kneeling to His Majesty, and an ingot or weight of gold of a pound weight) which the Treasurer of the Household delivers to the Lord Great Chamberlain and he to His Majesty, the Archbishop receiving them and placing them upon the Altar. This is followed by an oblation from the Queen Consort in similar form (a Pall or Altar Cloth and a mark weight of gold). Now, reparing for the last time to the Chairs (3), they kneel down at the faldstools on the south side of the Altar, whence after consecration has taken place and the Archbishops, the Dean, and Bishops Assistants have communicated, the Sovereign and Queen Consort advance to the Altar, where the Archbishop of Canterbury administers the Bread, and the Dean of Westminster the cup to them. They then replace their Crowns, and taking the Sceptres once again in their hands a return is made to the Thrones (1 and 2) for the final prayers and Te Deum. The Procession is now reformed, the Sovereign, carrying his Sceptre and Rod, the four Swords being borne before him, passes through the door (5) on the south side of the Altar into St Edward's Chapel, the Regalia being handed from the Altar by the Dean of Westminster to the Peers appointed to carry them. In like manner the Queen Consort, bearing her Sceptre in her right hand and her Ivory Rod in her left, passes into St Edward's Chapel by the door (8) on the north side of the Altar. Here, standing before St Edward's Altar (9) certain portions of the Regalia are given up and placed upon it, then having retired to the Traverses (10) provided and the Sovereign having exchanged the Imperial Mantle for his Robe of Purple Velvet, the Sovereign (now wearing the Imperial Crown) and the Consort bearing in their right hands the Sceptre with the Cross, and in their left, the Sovereign the Orb and the Queen Consort the Ivory Rod with the Dove, pass back to the west door of the Abbey accompanied by the bearers of the Swords and the Regalia, all Peers wearing their Coronets.

All swords in the Coronation procession are carried naked as well as erect throughout, except the Sword of State, which for a short period at the early part of the ceremony is carried in its scabbard.

There are three sets of robes used by the Sovereign during Coronation ceremony. (1) A crimson Robe of State worn on entering, (2) the actual Coronation vestments themselves, consisting of the Colobrium Sindonis or sleeveless coat, the Supertunica, the Armil or Stole, and the Imperial Mantle or Pall of Cloth of Gold, and (3) the Royal Robe of purple velvet worn in the procession from the Abbey, thus the Sovereign enters the Abbey in crimson, is crowned in gold, and leaves it in purple.

The derivation of the word king, is according to Chamberlayne, from the Saxon word König, or Cuning, which comes from Caw, intimating power, or Kew knowledge, wherewith every Sovereign, should be invested.

Some of the titles of our Saxon Kings were very quaint and pompous. These were discontinued by the Normans, and it was not until Henry IV adopted the title of "Grace," that prefixes came into use. These prefixes were successively changed (at the pleasure of the sovereigns themselves) into "Excellent Grace," "High and Mighty Prince," and "Highness" until Henry

VIII adopted those of "Majesty" and "Dread Sovereign."

In 1876 Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India, but the Imperial Dignity is not adopted in any part of the dominions except India. In 1901 the following addition was made to the style and title of King Edward VII—viz., "and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas."

The Sovereign's banner, commonly called the Royal Standard, is the personal flag of the Sovereign, and can only properly be flown over buildings or ships with His Majesty's permission, which permission is only granted when the King or Queen is actually present in person, and not when their Majesties are passing in processions.

THE QUEEN CONSORT

The Queen—i.e. Consort of the Sovereign—has a separate Court and Household as represented in Courts of Law (where she can sue or be sued in her own name, with the suffix of "Queen of England") by her own Attorney General and Solicitor General, and to compass or imagine her death (during the lifetime of her husband) is high treason. Provision is made for her by Statute, and she is usually, though not of right, crowned with the King.

THE QUEEN MOTHER

Takes precedence immediately after the Queen Consort, and has her own Household.

THE HEIR-APPARENT TO THE CROWN

Is next below the Sovereign in all honour and dignity—not as participating or comparing with the latter, who stands alone and supreme, but as enjoying the largest share of the honour which flows from the Crown.

No person can hold this position save a child of the Sovereign, or, if the former be dead, his, or her, direct descendant. This constant preference of the direct line to the closest collateral branch distinguishes the European from some of the Asiatic orders of succession, and tends greatly to preclude confusion and discord.

The male Heir Apparent has, since the institution of the title by Edward I (who, in 1301, conferred it on his son, Edward, born at Carnarvon in 1284), been usually but not invariably created Prince of Wales and, since 1399 the Earldom of Chester has always been conferred, together with the Principality of Wales. There is no succession to this title, which at every vacancy, becomes merged in the Crown, and is only renewed by the Sovereign's pleasure. Thus had George IV. died whilst Prince of Wales, his next brother, though heir apparent would not have been the Prince of Wales without being so created, similarly on the succession of King Edward VII his eldest surviving son was not Prince of Wales until so created some eight months later.

The Sovereign's eldest son is Duke of Cornwall from the moment of his birth, and becomes immediately entitled to the revenues of his Duchy, while minority is no bar to his being a member of the House of Lords, although it is usual to delay taking the seat until full age is reached. When there is no Duke of Cornwall, the Duchy is in the custody of the Crown and the revenues are paid to the King. The title, however, unlike that of Prince of Wales, does not always become merged in the Crown on succession to the Monarchy or at death, but passes at once to the next heir apparent being the eldest living son of the Sovereign to whom it is strictly limited, but in the event of the death of such heir-apparent the eldest son would not be Duke of Cornwall. Early in Queen Victoria's reign the net revenues of the property were about £14,000 per annum, but under the able superintendence of the late enjoyed in virtue of the Duchy rights is very considerable. The Sandringham estate was purchased out of a very large sum of ready money, arising from the accumulation of the annual revenues of this Duchy during minority.

Prince Consort (husband of Queen Victoria) a new system was introduced, and the income now

By course of the civil law he sits at the right hand of the Sovereign in all solemn assemblies of state and honour, but he has no kingly prerogatives, and acknowledges reverence to his sovereign.

An old statute of Edward III. enacts "that to compass or imagine the death of the King's eldest son and heir is crimen lèse majestatis" (high treason).

On the union of the Crowns of England and Scotland, King James's son (Prince Henry) was created "Prince of Great Britain and Ireland," and this nominally higher title survives, but the more venerable honour long since caused the other to fall into disuse.

The theoretical forms laid down for the ceremony of creating and investing a Prince of Wales are thus—

"He is presented before the King in his surcoat, cloak and mantle of crimson velvet, and girt with a belt of the same, when the King putteth a cap of crimson velvet, indented and turned up with ermine, and a coronet on his head, as a token of principality; and the King also putteth into his hand a verge of gold, the emblem of government, and a ring of gold on his middle finger to intimate that he must be a husband to his country and a father to his children. To him are likewise given and granted letters patent, to hold the same principality, to him and his heirs, Kings of England, by which words the separation of this principality is for ever prohibited. The coronet placed on his head is of gold, and consists of crosses patée and fleur-de-lis with the addition of one arch and in the midst a ball and a cross, as hath the royal diadem which was solemnly ordered to be used by a grant dated February 9, 1660-61, 11th Charles II., xxx. His mantle which he wears at the coronation is doubled below the elbow with ermine, spotted diamond wise, but the robe which he wears in Parliament is adorned with bars or guards of ermine, set at an equal distance one from the other, with a gold lace above each bar."

At the ceremony of investiture the Sovereign, having received the Letters Patent from the Lord Great Chamberlain hands them to the Home Secretary to read, as follows—

—by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith.

To all Archbishops, Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, Bishops, Barons, Baronets, Knights, Justices, Provosts, Ministers, and all other Our Faithful Subjects greeting.

Know ye that We have made and created and by these Our Letters Patent do make and create (here the Prince is invested by the Sovereign with the Mantle) Our Most Dear Son,

Prince of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Duke of Cornwall and Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Grand Steward of Scotland, Duke of Saxony and Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, and to the same, Our Most Dear Son have given and granted. And by this our present Charter do give grant, and confirm the name, style, title, dignity, and honour of the same Principality and Earldom. And Him Our said Most Dear Son, —, as has been accustomed, We do ennoble and invest with the said Principality and Earldom by girding Him with the sword (here the Prince is invested with the Sword by hanging it round his neck), by putting a Coronet on his head (here the Sovereign places the Coronet upon the Prince's head) and a gold ring on his finger (the gold ring is here placed upon the third finger of the Prince's left hand) and also by delivering a gold rod into his hand (here the Sovereign places the golden verge in the Prince's left hand).

Wherefore We will and strictly command for Us, our heirs and successors, that Our said Most Dear Son ———, may have the name, style, title dignity, and honour of the Principality of Wales and Earldom of Chester afore-said unto him and his heirs kings of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas as is above mentioned

The Prince then does homage for the Principality of Wales and the Earldom of Chester, and the Home Secretary returns to the Sovereign the Letters Patent, to be placed in the right hand of his Royal Highness by the Sovereign who at the same time raises the Prince from his knees and salutes him on each cheek

Investiture takes place at Carnarvon Castle on a raised platform in the inner courtyard, and after investiture the Prince of Wales proceeds to Queen Eleanor's gateway of the Castle, and is there presented (as well as at other points) to his people

When a Prince of Wales takes his seat in the House of Lords, the order of Ceremonial is on the following lines —

The procession consists of—
 Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (or his Deputy) Garter Principal King of Arms (carrying the Patent)
 The Earl Marshal (or his Deputy)
 The Lord Great Chamberlain
 The Lord Privy Seal
 The Lord President of the Council
 The Learner of the Prince's Coronet (which is carried on a crimson velvet cushion)
H R H THE PRINCE OF WALES

Gentleman in attendance upon H R H
 The Prince of Wales proceeds from the Bar up the House with the customary reverences to the Cloth of Estate the Lord Chancellor seated on the Woolsack receives from him his Writ of Summons and from Garter King of Arms the Letters Patent His Royal Highness then proceeds to the Table with his supporters, the rest of the procession being conducted to the foot of it, the Letters Patent and Writ of Summons are read by the Clerk of the Parliament at the Table, when the Prince of Wales takes the Oath and subscribes the Declaration, he is then conducted to his chair on the right of the Throne, and being covered and having taken his seat, the ceremony is concluded Peers in the procession wear Parliamentary Robes and are Knights of Orders their Collars.

In 1833 Letters Patent under the Great Seal were granted declaring that the children of the eldest son of any Prince of Wales shall at all times have the title of 'Royal Highness', but by further letters patent December 1917, this privilege was confined to the eldest living son only of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, while grandchildren of the sons of any Sovereign in the direct male line were granted the style and title of the children of Dukes.

the father's side were all styled 'Royal Highness' as also were the children of the eldest son of any Prince of Wales (see ante) while grandchildren being issue of daughters were usually granted by Royal Warrant the title of 'Highness', but since that date it has been ordained that for the future the style of 'Royal Highness' shall be confined to the issue of any Sovereign and to issue of the sons of any Sovereign while the styles of 'Highness' and 'Serene Highness' will be allowed to lapse gradually. The titles of 'Prince' and 'Princess' will also be confined in the future to all children of any Sovereign and to the children of the sons of any Sovereign. From at least the time of George II and up to 1903 the courtesy title of 'Princess Royal' was conceded to and borne by the eldest daughter of the Sovereign for the time being without any special warrant, but in Nov. 1903 a Royal Warrant confirming this style and title to the Duchess of Fife (elder daughter of King Edward VII) was gazetted.

The coronet of the Princes of the Blood Royal is similar to that of the Heir Apparent, but without the arch and orb. All Royal Coronets are chased as jewelled.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY

Is the first peer of England next to the Royal Family, preceding not only all Dukes, but all the great officers of the Crown. The Bishop of London is his provincial Dean the Bishop of Lincoln his Chancellor, and the Bishop of Rochester his Chaplain. 'It belongs to him to crown the King', and the Sovereign and his or her Consort, wherever they may be located, are speciales domesticæ parochiani Arch. Cant. (parishioners of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury).

The ecclesiastical and secular power of the Archbishop of Canterbury was formerly enormous, especially when he held the office of Lord Chancellor, and instances are not few in which the influence of the Archiepiscopal see was formidable of the throne itself. Since the Reformation the Archbishop's secular influence may be said to have altogether ceased.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is Primate of all England, is entitled to the prefix of "Your Grace," and styles himself "By Divine Providence, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury."

An Archbishop's mitre is the same as that of a Bishop.

THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR

Is created by the will of the Sovereign, by the act of delivering the Great Seal into his custody, and, in virtue of his office, is the second peer in the Kingdom. He affixes the Great Seal to all patents, writs, and grants, holds office during the pleasure of the Crown, but practically resigns office with his party, is Speaker of the House of Lords, and by virtue of his office a Member of the Privy Council, is Keeper of the Great Seal (of Great Britain), head of the Legal Profession in England and President of the Supreme Court of Judicature, issues the writs for summoning Parliament, and transacts all business connected with the custody of the Great Seal; is principal adviser to the Crown in matters of law, may be added a sixth—viz., those Archbishops, and Bishops, who are entitled to a seat in the House of Peers, and possess all the faculties and privileges of Peers of Parliament during the time they hold office.

The ceremony of admitting a peer into the House of Lords is thus: He is introduced by two peers of his own degree, who conduct him to the Lord Chancellor. His patent is carried by Garter King of Arms; the new peer presents it together with his writ of summons to the Lord Chancellor, this dignity directs the same to be read, the oaths are administered, the peer takes his seat, and then, rising, returns to the Chancellor, who congratulates him upon his succession, or elevation as the case may be.

The privileges enjoyed by peers were formerly very numerous. Some of these would now be considered intolerable, while others have fallen into desuetude from the extinction of the matters and circumstances to which they related. But some important ones continue, e.g.—

They are free from arrests for debt, as being the Sovereign's hereditary counsellors; therefore a peer cannot be outlawed in any civil action, and no attachment lies against his person, but if he becomes a bankrupt he cannot vote until his bankruptcy proceeding are ended.

They are free from attending courts leet or sheriffs' turns, or, in cases of riot, the posse comitatus.

In criminal cases they are tried by peers only, who give their verdict simply upon their honour, in a court specially fitted up at the expense of the Crown, in the middle of Westminster Hall.

They may sit with their heads covered in courts of justice.

Each peer may qualify a certain number of chaplains as follows.—An Archbishop eight, a Duke, six, a Marquess five, an Earl, five, a Viscount four, a Bishop, six, a Baron, three. A Knight of the Garter may qualify three, and a Peeress, being a widow, two.

To secure the honour of, and to prevent the spreading of any scandal upon peers or any great officers of the realm, by reports, there is an express law, called scandalum magnatum, by which any man convicted of making a scandalous report, though true, against a peer of the realm is condemned to an arbitrary fine and to remain in custody till the same be paid.

Barons Kingsale and Forester are the only peers claiming the privilege of remaining covered in the royal presence without special permission.

In case of a poll tax, peers bear the greatest burden, as everyone is then taxed according to his degree.

A peer may not interfere in any way in the election of members to parliament.

A peer is entitled to have Supporters granted to be borne with his title, and to the use of the coronet of his rank, but the eldest sons of peers are not entitled to the use of either coronet or supporters, neither are the younger sons of dukes and marquesses or those of any peer.

Peerage patents are on parchment, and bear no signature only the Great Seal.

Claims to dormant or abeyant Peerages or to Peerages the succession to which is in dispute are dealt with by the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords on petition to the Crown, presented through the Home Secretary, who first refers the accompanying documents to the Attorney General in order that he may report upon them to the Sovereign and advise in the matter.

These the Attorney General passes to the Counsel for the Crown in Peerage claims, and he reports to the Attorney General who then to obtain further particulars and elucidate any further details necessary, hears the petitioner and his counsel, after which the Attorney-General himself law appoints the Judges of the High Court, and the Judges of County Courts, inserts the names of Justices in the commissions of the Peace, and is patron of all Crown livings rated under £20 per annum. As visitor in right of the Crown of all hospitals and colleges of royal foundation, has the general guardianship of all infants, idiots, and lunatics, and exercises a special jurisdiction in questions relating to charities and trust estates. He ranks above all dukes not of the Blood Royal, and next below the Archbishop of Canterbury. For many years the Lord High Chancellor (when not of Baronial rank) has been invariably created a peer concomitantly with his appointment. During absence abroad on official business the office is put in commission.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK

Is the third peer in the Kingdom, and precedes all secular peers, except the Lord High Chancellor. He is Primate of England, has the privilege of crowning the Consort, and is her perpetual chaplain. He is entitled to the prefix of "Your Grace," and styles himself "By Divine Permission, Lord Archbishop of York," and possesses within his own province powers nearly equivalent to those exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury within his.

THE NOBILITY

The true criterion of nobility is now as it always has been, the lawful bearing of arms, and in all countries outside the United Kingdom, the term "noble" is habitually used in this its original sense, and in France at least precedence is invariably regulated by the date of the grant of arms, and not according to titular distinction, but in England the custom has arisen, however incorrect in itself, of practically restricting the use of the word "nobleman" to members of the peerage, and those who by courtesy bear titles in virtue of their immediate connection with noble houses. It should, however, always be borne in mind that, strictly speaking, every one bearing duly authorised arms is equally entitled to be styled "noble," be he Peer, Baronet, Knight, or Gentleman.

The nobility (using the word in its proper acceptance) of this kingdom is usually divided into two classes—the greater and the less (nobiles majores and nobiles minores)—the former customarily consisting of all degrees of the peers spiritual and temporal from a Baron upwards and inclusive.

PEERS

Practically the degrees of the Peerage* in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland are five—viz., Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, and Barons (including Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, who are Life Peers), to which

* SCOTCH AND IRISH PEERS.—Scottish peers take precedence of British peers of the same rank created since the Union with Scotland, and Irish peers created before the Union with Ireland, in like manner, take place of British peers created since. reports to the Home Secretary. If his report is unfavourable to the petitioner, he advises that the petition shall not be referred to the Committee for Privileges, but if, on the contrary, he considers that the proofs and documents submitted at the hearing make out a prima facie case, he advises the House of Lords to refer it to their Committee for Privileges, which goes into the case in detail, the petitioner and any opposing claimant being represented by counsel, while the Crown is represented by the Attorney General and the counsel for Peerage claims. The Committee for Privileges reports to the Sovereign the conclusions at which it arrives.

Occasionally the eldest son of a peer is summoned to the House of Lords during his father's lifetime in one of his father's minor titles, and should he predecease his father the title and seat would pass to his son (if any).

The principal rules or considerations as generally applied to the selection of Peerage titles are as follows—

In the first place it should be borne in mind that the Sovereign, as the fountain of all honour, can of course bestow any title. He may please, but in practice the following rules are usually observed, although there are certain exceptions—

Titles once conferred upon any member of the Royal Family are not now ever again bestowed outside the Royal Circle.

Every peer must be described in his patent as "of ——" (somewhere), usually the principal seat of the recipient, or some place with which he has definite connection.

Any semblance of duplication of titles is avoided as far as ever possible.

A surname may, if desired, ad vis be adopted as a title, although another dignity of the same style be already in existence, but in that case the recipients of all such similar (surname) titles of the same rank, except the first one to be created, must habitually add the territorial designation as an affix to the title by which they are commonly known. For instance, Baron Stanley (creation 1455), Baron Stanley (creation 1832) known as "Lord Stanley of Bickerstaffe"; Baron Stanley (creation 1838) as "Lord Stanley of Alderley"; Baron Stanley (creation 1886) as "Lord Stanley of Preston". Again, Baron Curzon (creation 1794) and Baron Curzon (creation 1898) as "Lord Curzon of Kedleston".

It is also always permissible for any peer to use as an affix to his title the territorial designation indicated in his patent, whether it appears there as part of the title or not, but the number of peers who have been created with a territorial designation as actually part of the title is very limited, of those whose patents indicate creations of the last mentioned nature, some modern instances are Lord Ritchie of Dundee, Lord of Fyvie Murray of Elibank, and Parker of Waddington.

In the case of Life Peers the surname is usually (though not always) adopted.

A title once extinct but subsequently revived is rarely re-created in a lower rank than before, but this rule is not an invariable one (vide titles of Barrymore and Eversley).

The name of a county or county town is not as a rule permissible as a peerage title below the rank of earl (although exception may be made in favour of any one particularly eminent either as a statesman or in some other walk of life). Towns of large population are usually reserved for the higher steps in the peerage.

It may be added that peers—excepting the archbishops and bishops who each have special signatures of their own—sign by their titles only, as also do the eldest sons of peers bearing as a courtesy title one of their father's minor honours, but a peeress by marriage signs with her Christian name or initial prefixed to the title, a peeress in her own right however, signs with title only, thus as a peer Duke.—This title is the highest of our designations of nobility. We have not "princes" outside the blood royal.

DUKE'S CORONET

Indee, so pre eminent is dignity is the ducal title, that each royal prince on, or shortly after attaining his majority is usually created a Duke, as if the latter were the superior distinction. Thus, Prince Alfred was created Duke of Edinburgh, and Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught.

Much learned ingenuity has been expended in endeavouring to trace the origin of a title which has, in one meaning or another, existed since the origin of the Latin tongue—dux (a leader) indicating a leading man or chieftain, and however antiquarians may refine upon the matter, there cannot be any doubt that the word "duke" means a man of the highest rank and mark.

Hollingshead in his Chronicle, f. 235, 233, that "King Edgar's second wife was called Alfreda, the daughter of Orger, Duke of Devon by whom he had 3 sons, Edgar, that was afterwards King of this land and is buried in Powles." This, however, may have been only an official title for the word frequently appears in Saxon chronicles in a sense inferior to that of earl, bishop, and even abbot.

Orho the Great, about the year 970, is supposed to have been the first to regularly constitute the title of duke, as one of honour and nobility, and it became hereditary in France and other parts of the Continent long before it was adopted in England. It has been surmised that one cause of its not being introduced earlier in England was the reluctance of the Norman kings—themselves Dukes of Normandy—to grant subjects a title resembling their own.

The following passage from a quaint old writer gives an authentic account of the creation of the first English Duke:—

"The first Duke that I finde sence the Conquest was made by King Edward III. regent sui, where he made of the earldome of Cornwall a duchye, and created the Black Prince, his eldest sonne, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, and Earl of Chester, and I have a dede made by the said Black Prince wherein his stile is, Edward Digne Fitz de Roy D'Engleterre et de France, Prince de Aquitaine et de Gales, Duc de Cornwall, Count de Chester, and Seigneur de Bescane."

In former times hereditary dukes were created with the following or similar words—

"We give and grant the name, title, state, style, place, seat, pre-eminence, honour, authority, and dignity of a Duke and by the cincture of a sword, and imposition of a cap and coronet of gold upon his head, as also by delivering unto him a verge of gold, we do really invest," &c.

but thus and other ceremonies formerly attending the creation of dukes and other peers are no longer observed.

The ducal order, which was extinct, or in abeyance during Elizabeth's reign, was revived by James I. in the person of his favourite, Villiers.

The mantle or surcoat (to be worn over full Court dress, uniform, or regimentals) which a duke wears at a coronation of king or queen is of crimson velvet lined with white taffeta, edged with miniver (i.e., the white fur of the ermine or stoat, with the natural black tails left attached) and the cape furred with miniver pure (i.e., the white fur of the ermine without the black tails) and powdered with four bars or rows of ermine (i.e., narrow pieces of black fur symmetrically sewn on). His parliamentary robes are of fine scarlet cloth lined with taffeta and doubled with four guards of ermine at equal distances, with gold lace above each guard and tied up to the left shoulder by a white riband, his cap is of crimson velvet turned up with ermine, having a gold tassel on the top, his coronet is a circle of gold (silver gilt) chased as jewelled and set round with eight strawberry leaves. Parliamentary robes for other degrees are similar to above with the distinguishing number of guards. He is styled His Grace, and by the Sovereign in public instruments, Our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin, with the addition of and counsellor when a member of the Privy Council The coronation robe of a duchess consists of a crimson velvet mantle with cape furled with miniver pure, the cape powdered with four rows of ermine (i.e., narrow pieces of black fur) and edged round with miniver pure five inches wide, the kirtle meeting at the waist over a white panel and the bodice being low and tight fitting, with stomacher and panel of white or cream material, fur bordering the top of the bodice and being continued in a band over each shoulder. Her coronet is the same as that of her husband, while her train is two yards in length.

The eldest son of a duke bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, and each younger son and daughter is addressed by his or her Christian name as "Lord John," or "Lady Mary."

Marquess is a title apparently of German origin, and, as the name implies is derived from the Government of marches, or frontier provinces. It was called by the Saxons Markin hence and by the Germans, Markgrave. It has the next place of honour to that of a duke, and was introduced many years subsequent to the establishment of that dignity in England.

MARQUESS'S CORONET

The first on whom that honour was conferred was the great favourite of King Richard II. Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who was created Marquess of Dublin in 1385 and placed in Parliament between the dukes and earls. The marquesses were created by the King by "cincture of the sword, and imposition of the cap of honour and dignity, with the coronet, as also by the delivery of a charter or writing." The creations, however, were not very numerous and it would appear that the new honour was not greatly coveted by the old nobility, as in the Parliamentary Rolls it is recorded that

"John de Beaufort, Earl of Somerset, was by Richard II. created Marquess of Dorset, and when afterwards, Henry VI. deprived him of that title, the Commons of England made humble suit in Parliament to the King, that he would restore him to his title of marquess. The Earl himself opposed the petition, saying that 'It was a new dignity and altogether unknown to his ancestors, and thence, therefore, he neither craved it, nor in any wise would he accept it.'"

The creation to this dignity was formerly attended with nearly the same ceremony as that of a duke, but it now simply takes place by patent under the Great Seal.

The coronation robes are the same as those of a Duke, with three and a half rows of ermine (i.e., four on the right side, and three on the left), the cap is of crimson velvet turned up with ermine having a gold tassel at top, the coronet is of gold (silver-gilt) chased as jewelled, with four silver balls, and four golden strawberry leaves mixed alternately, the latter raised a little on points above the rim. A marchioness's coronation robe has four inches of miniver and three and a half rows of ermine and the train is a yard and three quarters long. The coronet of a marchioness is the same as that of a marquess.

The general style of a marquess is Most Honourable, and he is styled by the King or Queen, Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council.

The eldest son of a marquess bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, and each younger son and daughter is addressed by his or her Christian name, as "Lord George," or "Lady Jane."

Earl—It has been customary to identify this ancient English dignity with the Latin Comes, "Companion," French Comte, Anglicized, Count, one of the duties or privileges of possessors of the title being to accompany the King, and to give counsel advice, and aid on important occasions.

We are told that "Constantine the Great, in order to secure the attachment of his followers, created a number of these Comites, as Comes Domesticiorum (Master of the Household), Comes Stabuli (Master of the Horse), also such dignities as Comes

EARL'S CORONET

Oronensis Comes (Earl of Lancaster) of the East, of Africa, &c.) Hence ever after the name of Comes imparted dignity, and the authority or government, which was at first temporary, was afterwards enjoyed for life. Moreover, in process of time, when the Roman empire was divided into many kingdoms, this title was retained, and our English Saxons called those in Latin Comites and Consules, whom, in their own language they called Ealdormen, the same which the Danes in their tongue called Eorlas, that is honourable, as Ethelward writes, by which name somewhat softened, they are called by us, at this day, Earls. In the Saxon times the title was one of the highest dignity and eminence. Earl Godwin occupied a rank much higher than that of any noble of the present day. It was even applied to sovereign princes. Thus William the Conqueror, sovereign of Normandy is frequently called Earl of Normandy, and William of Malmesbury never mentions him otherwise. The Norman kings adopted the Saxon title and the first earls created were dignitaries of enormous power, holding not only proprietary, but virtually sovereign sway over large districts of country. Hugh Lupus Earl of Chester was a real potentate within his territory, though exercising his authority in the name of the king, and so with others. But the number of earls increased rapidly, whilst the possibility of furnishing them with land and revenue diminished in proportionate ratio, so that various devices were resorted to for the purpose of furnishing the new creations with the means of support. The dignity of the distinction was thus depreciated. Earls were then created with the name of some place appended to the title, and the third penny of the shire was assigned unto them, for example, the Empress Maud, daughter and heir to King Henry I., created an earl in the following words—

"I, Maud, daughter of King Henry, and lady of the Englishmen, do give and grant unto Geoffrey de Marignay for his service, and to his heirs after him by right of inheritance, to be Earls of Essex, and to have the third penny out of the Sheriff's Court, issuing of all pleas, as an Earle should have thereof his country in all things."

The earl's coronation robe is the same as a duke's, except that he has only three rows of ermine, his cap is the same as theirs. It is uncertain when the coronets of dukes, marquesses, and earls were settled. Sir Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, Viscount Cranbourne, was the first of that degree who wore a coronet. An earl's coronet is a circle of gold (silver gilt) chased as jewelled and bordered with ermine, heightened with eight pyramidal points, or rays, placed alternately with as many strawberry leaves, a large silver ball is placed on the top of each ray. His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the King or Queen as Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council. A countess has on her coronation robe three inches of miniver and a like number of bars of ermine the train being a yard and half long while the coronet is the same as that of an earl.

The eldest son of an earl bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, each younger son is styled "Honourable," as the "Hon. Robert," and each daughter is styled "Lady," as "Lady Emma."

Viscount (Viscomes) was anciently the name of him who held the chief office under an earl. The latter being often at Court the viscount was his deputy to look after the affairs of the county. In the reign of Henry VI. 1439 the title became a degree of honour, and was made hereditary. The first viscount in England, created by patent, was John Lord

* Immediately after the Conquest earls began to be feudal, hereditary, and parliamentary—that is, by fee or tenure, by service, by inheritance and by lands. In the twelfth century they were named earls without any addition—Earl Hugh, Earl Roger, &c.

† Of course this source of provision had a limit, and at a subsequent period the monarch was accustomed to assign pensions, not only to earls, but to other persons whom he ennobled in the following proportions:—1 viscount, a fee of 20 marks. Earls, of £20. Marquesses, a fee of 40 marks, and Dukes of £40, out of some particular part of the royal revenue. A creation fee to barons was settled at 100 marks. The first Earl created, Mowbray, Earl of Northampton, of the 12th century, was assigned to him and his issue male a creation fee of 20 marks per annum.

Beaumont, who was by the above monarch created Viscount Beaumont and he gave him precedence above all barons.

The coronation robes of a viscount are the same as a duke's, with the exception that he has only two and a half rows of ermine (i.e., three on the right, and two on the left side) his cap is the same, and the gold (silver gilt) circlet of his coronet is surmounted by sixteen silver balls. The robe of a viscountess has two and a half inches of miniver and two and a half bars of ermine a yard and a quarter train while the coronet is the same as her husband's. His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the King or Queen as Our right trusty and well beloved cousin.

All children of Viscounts bear the courtesy title of "Honourable," as the "Hon. Henry," or the "Hon. Margaret."

Bishops—The Bishops of England, with the exceptions noted,* are also barons of the kingdom and of Parliament. To these, says Camden—

"Py right and custom it appertained to be with the rest of the peers personally present at all Parliament whatsoever there to consult to handle to ordain, decree and determine in regard of the baronies which they held of the king."

Bishops take precedence of the temporal barons and it would seem that at one time their degree of precedence went even higher, for—

"At the coronation of Charles II. it was expressly ordered in doing homage to the king, that, according to ancient custom the archbishops and bishops should precede all the lay lords and even the Duke of York."

The Bishops of London Durham and Winchester have precedence over all the other bishops,

A bishop impales his arms with those of the See, but he does not bear crest, supporters, or motto.

The wives and children of bishops have not any special precedence.

Baron *—Much obscurity prevails as to the ancient meaning and even derivation of the word baron, and eccentric speculations have been indulged in with respect to their ancient position. By some it was supposed to have originally meant a free soldier by others a free man or agnor, a man equal to any other man, and so on. It never occurs as a title of dignity in Saxon annals, and although the Normans introduced it into England (the Anglo-Saxon thane being changed into Baron) it was some time before it implied a man of distinguished mark.

Earls had their barons under them and charters are extant in which earls addressed them thus: "To all my barons, as well French as English, greeting." Even citizens of good note were some times called barons. The salient fact however is that the barons of England soon rose to be the great moving power in the State, and how the title was accounted may be judged from a summons of Henry III. to the High Court of Parliament—

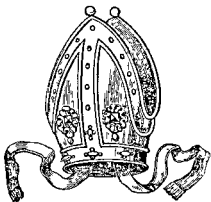

"For he after many troubles and enormous vexations between the King himself and Simon of Montfort, with other barons and after appeased, did decree and ordain that all those earls and barons of the realm of England, unto whom the King himself vouchsafed to direct his writs of summons should come unto his Parliament, and none others."

The date of this (the first precept) is 49 Henry III., 1264.

The first baron created BY PATENT was John Beauchamp de Holt created Baron Kidderminster, by Richard II. in 1387. The fact appears to be that the title or dignity of baron at first vague and uncertain, like other designations and distinctions of disturbed times was, like those, moulded and moulded with the growth of constitutional law and defined right until it has taken its present intelligible position amongst English orders and degrees of honour.

The succession to baronies by writ is not limited to heirs male, but is vested in heirs general. In the event of the death of a baron by writ without male issue the title will fall into abeyance should he leave two or more daughters and will so continue until only one daughter or the sole heir of one of the daughters survives. The

The mitre, placed over the arms of a bishop, is a round cap pointed and cleft at the top, from which hang two pendants, fringed at the ends, it is surmounted by a fillet of gold, set with precious stones. The mitre of the Bishop of Durham (as nominally Count Palatine of Durham) is however represented as issuing out of a ducal crest coronet.

Bishops of Ireland who were consecrated prior to the Disestablishment Act of 1868 were entitled to the prefix of "Lord" and though retaining their former precedence had no seats in the House of Lords and under the Welsh Church Act 1914 Bishops of Wales ceased to have seats in the House of Lords. crown can, however, at any time terminate the allegiance in favour of any one of the co-heiresses, but it cannot alienate the barony from the representatives of the first baron. The fee paid in on determination of the allegiance of a barony by writ was fixed in 1013 at £100.

When a baron is called to the House of Peers by writ of summons the writ is in the sovereign's name.

The coronation robes of a baron have but two rows of ermine, in other respects they are the same as those of other peers. King Charles II. granted a coronet to the barons who until his reign wore only a plain circle of gold. The coronet is formed of six silver balls set at equal distances on an unchained circle of gold (silver) bordered with ermine. A baroness has two inches of miniver and two bars of ermine on her coronation robe which has a train a yard long. She wears a coronet same as that of a baron.

[To illustrate the meaning of COURTESY TITLES, reference may be made to the terms in which a Royal Commission issued to the Earl Russell, a younger son of the sixth Duke of Bedford, was, before his elevation to the peerage, designated by courtesy Lord John Russell, whereas, strictly, he would have been simply "John Russell, Esq." but for the prefix of "right honourable" derived from his political office. In Parliament and society he was invariably spoken of as "Lord John Russell," and addressed as "My Lord," but in Royal proclamations and other documents his designation was "The Right Honourable John Russell" commonly called Lord John Russell.]

LIFE PEERS.

Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, of whom there may not be more than six, are appointed by Patent, and rank as Barons for life, and each is entitled to a writ of summons to attend, and to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

They hold office during good behaviour, notwithstanding the demise of the Crown, but may be removed from such office, on the address of both Houses of Parliament. Their patents are on parchment under the Great Seal.

The dignity of Lords of Parliament does not descend to their heirs. Their wives rank as Baronesses, and are entitled to the prefix of "Lady" while their children are now styled "Hon." and hold special precedence.

The robes of a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary are the same as a Baron's.

LORDS OF SESSION IN SCOTLAND

Are the Senators of the College of Justice in Scotland, and on appointment to the Bench receive the judicial title of Lord — (most usually the surname), with the prefix of "Hon." by which they are known, with the exception of the Lord Justice General and Lord Justice Clerk, both of whom use not the judicial title by which they take their seats, but the official designations being primarily Officers of State.

A Royal Warrant granted in February 1903, Scottish Lords of Session who have retired are permitted to retain the title of "Honourable Lord" while their wives are also granted the title of "Lady" to be retained after the decease of the husband but during widowhood only.

BARONETS

The title of Baronet is of ancient date and was originally given to a class of Bannarets who were hereditary Barons of Parliament, and occupied the same position as the existing dignity viz., between the great Barons (now peers) and lesser Barons or Knights and gentlemen.

By the statutes of Richard II. every Archbishop, Bishop, Abbot, Prior, Duke, Earl, Baron, Baronet, and knight of the Shire was commanded to appear in Parliament according to ancient usage, and in an attainder under Henry VI., one of the jury challenged himself because his ancestors had been Baronets and Seigneurs des Parlements.

This degree of nobility also existed in Ireland where it was hereditary, in certain families. Thus, among others, Sir Leger was Baronet of Slernarge Fitzgerald, Baronet of Burnchurch, Welsh, Baronet of Nannagh (ancestor of the Duke of Wellington), and Nangle, Baronet of the Navan. These baronets were descended from some lesser lords or gentlemen whom Edward III. had been obliged to summon by writ, to serve and sit as barons in his next Parliament, in order that by their votes he might carry his measures in defiance of the opposition of the Ecclesiastical Lords who had greatly crossed him in his designs. These persons having been summoned for one Parliament only did not retain their baronial rank and were afterwards styled baronets.

The circumstance of the discovery by Sir Robert Cotton an eminent herald and quarry, of Letters Patent of the 15th Edward III. conferring the dignity of baronet on William de la Pole and his heirs, in return for a sum of money of which the King and his army stood greatly in need, is said to have decided King James I. on reviving this rank and constituting it a hereditary dignity.

The existing baronetage of England rests on three letters patent under the Great Seal and dates from 1611, in which year James I. established the hereditary dignity, state and degree of baronet with style and title and precedence for each, his wife and children at first limiting to 1000, the number of baronets of England to exist at one time and ordering that no degree, order, name, title, dignity, or state under the degree, dignity, or state of barons of England should ever be created superior or equal to the degree of and dignity of baronet. The second letters patent gave a newly defined precedence at the same time undertaking that no person or persons beneath the degree of Lords of Parliament—except those enumerated—should ever have place, precedence, or pre-eminence over or equal to baronets, and that no person or persons should have or take place between baronets and the younger sons of Viscounts and Barons, while there was also added permission for the eldest sons of baronets to claim the honour of knighthood on coming of age the right to charge their Armorial Bearings with a canton or inescutcheon of the arms of Ulster—argent a sinister hand couped at the wrist and erect gules (commonly known as the bloody

BADGE OF ULSTER

Hand, or Badge of Ulster)—a place near the Royal Standard in battle, a funeral ceremony "meane betwix that of a Baron and a Knight," and a right for all baronets, then and in future, to have Letters Patent under the Great Seal of England to the effect of former letters patent of creation and these presents, the 3rd letters patent ratified and confirmed the previous ones and ordained the Degree of Baronet to be and be reputed to be a Degree of Dignity, Hereditary, mean in place between the Barons and the Knights, defined the precedence of their eldest and other sons, and set forth that all doubts and questions arising in future concerning precedence, privilege, or other matter touching baronets, should be decided according to the rules, customs, and laws of other degrees of Hereditary Dignity. In 1619 the dignity was further extended to Ireland, the baronets of which enjoy all the rights and privileges confirmed to the baronets of England, and the same were continued to baronets of Great Britain who date from 1707, and to baronets of the United Kingdom who date from 1801.

In 1624 James I. took steps to create a Scottish Branch, these were carried out in 1625 by his son, Charles I. who granted to baronets of Scotland, or as frequently called Nova Scotia baronets similar privileges (except the Ulster augmentation), and in addition grants of land in Nova Scotia with plenary baronial rights and jurisdictions and legislative powers in that plantation and precedence above lesser barons in Scotland while it was at first provided that they should charge their armorial bearings with the arms of Nova Scotia and by a further Ordinance of Charles I. (17th November, 1629)

BADGE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Ordinance of Charles I. (17th November, 1629)

* There is also a patent of Edward VI. on record granting the "order, state, rank, honour and dignity of a Baronet" to Ralph Fane for himself, his heirs, but without any specific provision for succession (see page 101).

they were granted permission to wear about the neck "an orange tawine silk ribbon whereon shall be pendant in a scutcheon argent, a salure azure thereon an inescutcheon of the armes of Scotland, with an Imperial Crown above the scutcheon and encircled with this motto "Fax mentis Honestæ Gloria"

These Privileges, as well as the Patents of creation, which are identical in terms with those creating Peers, would seem to indicate that in founding the Degree of Baronet, James I created a dignity possessing some of the privileges of the Peerage and some of the Knightage, because the families who were first honoured were territorial barons as well as very generally drawn from the rank of persons who, as a matter of course were knighted about four fifths of the creations of 1611 being already knights

The baronets of England and Ireland applied to Charles I for permission to wear the Ulster badge in a similar manner to that of the baronets of Nova Scotia, and it is believed the King granted their request, as the badge was so worn in the 17th century, and specimens of it made for this purpose still exist. The late Sir George Duckett exhibited at the South Kensington Museum the Ulster badge worn by Sir Thomas Frankland, 1st Bt, of Thirkleby (creation 1662) on a diplomatic mission to Spain. Sir George Duckett subsequently sold the badge, which was originally set in diamonds, to a descendant of the Frankland family.

The baronets of England, of Scotland, of Great Britain, of Ireland, and of the United Kingdom, rank among themselves according to the dates of their respective patents.

The object of instituting this Degree in England and Ireland was to promote the plantation of Ulster and to this end each baronet was required to pay into the Exchequer, upon receiving his patent under the Great Seal, the sum of £1,200 for fees of honour, and for maintaining thirty soldiers in Ireland for three years, at the rate of eightpence per diem each man. The baronetage of Nova Scotia was established in the same way with a view to colonise that country.

Every person who sought the dignity of a baronet was compelled to give proof that he was a gentleman of blood (i.e., descended on the father's side from a grandfather who bore arms), possessed a good reputation, and had an annual revenue of not less than £1,000.

Baronets are frequently and erroneously described as belonging to an order of hereditary knighthood. This mistake doubtless arose from the circumstance that all the first baronets were knighted, and that the eldest sons of baronets had the right to demand knighthood on attaining the age of twenty one, and were, after the death of their fathers, known as "knights baronets." A baronet does not belong to any order of knighthood, and is not a knight until he has been so dubbed. That the baronetage was never intended as an order of knighthood is moreover evidenced from the fact that baronetesses have been created, e.g., Dame Mary Dolles, of Osberton, Notts, was in 1635 made a Baroness of Nova Scotia and in 1686 King James II conferred a baronetcy on Cornelius Speelman, a General in the States of Holland, with a special clause conferring on his mother the rank and title of a Baroness of England [see Speelman, Bt.]

The eldest sons or heirs apparent of baronets whose patents are dated prior to December 19th, 1827, have, upon attaining their majority, the privilege of demanding knighthood. This claim is, however, seldom made, possibly because George IV, on the date before referred to, ordered that all letters patent that might thereafter be granted to confer baronetcies should be made without any such clause as is before mentioned, though this order was made without in any way prejudicing letters patent previously granted, or to the rights and privileges of any baronet, or his heirs male. Ludlow Cotter, son of Sir James Lawrence Cotter, 4th baronet of Rockforest, in 1874, when 21 years of age, received the honour of knighthood, and this is the latest instance of the privilege being exercised.

It should, however, always be borne in mind that though created for an ephemeral and in itself mercenary object which its members did not accomplish the Baronetage has always been a dignified degree of hereditary distinction, the original members having been carefully selected from wealthy, distinguished and noble (i.e., arms bearing) families of great territorial and social position, most of the early creations being in favour of representatives of Hastings or Early Plantagenet "tenantes in capite" or barons as then understood; and the title is now bestowed, and willingly accepted, as the reward of merit, or eminence in any pursuit or position. Every gentleman upon being created a baronet is required to record his pedigree in one of the Colleges of Arms. On December 3rd, 1783, King George III promulgated an order in which every baronet was required to register his pedigree, and to receive a certificate from one of the Colleges of Arms. This order, however, gave such umbrage to a large portion of the then existing baronets, that his Majesty revoked it, but ordained that it should remain in force as to subsequent creations. By a Royal Warrant dated February 11th, 1814, establishing an official Roll of the Baronets, the Warrants of December 3rd, 1783, and February 24th, 1789 were cancelled.

The Official Roll of Baronets was first printed Feb 23rd 1814. It is published annually in the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Gazette, and anyone who considers he is entitled to be enrolled therein is at liberty to petition the Crown through the Home Secretary. Every person succeeding to a baronetcy must exhibit his proofs of succession to one of the Kings of Arms (according to their respective heraldic jurisdiction), who reports thereon to the Secretary of State. Should the Secretary of State find any difficulty in advising the Crown as to any claim, he refers the matter to either the Attorney-General for England, the Lord Advocate for Scotland, or the Attorney-General for Ireland, as the case may be, and further, may, on consideration of the opinion obtained, direct that the matter be referred to the specially appointed Committee of the Privy Council for examination and advice to the Crown. Every person on succession to a baronetcy, on being created a baronet, or on claiming to be placed on the Roll, must pay a fee of five pounds to the Secretary of State, and within six months from the date of succession or creation must register his full name, and the full names and ages of his living descendants at the College of Arms, the Lyon Office, or the Ulster Office, as the case may be. The Roll is kept at the Home Office by the Registrar of the Baronetage (Henry Butler Simpson, Esq., C.B.) and there is an Assistant Registrar (Henry Thomas Shorey, Esq., M.L.E.)

The patent of a baronet is on parchment under the Great Seal.

The Standing Council of the Baronetage, the office of which is at 58, Coleman Street, E.C., was founded in 1893 to maintain the ancient rights and privileges of the Order.

A baronet's wife is entitled to the prefix of either "Dame" or "Lady."

KNIGHTS

Though knights are ranged low upon the lists of precedence, their rank is not only the most ancient, but the most illustrious, for in former ages all men distinguished by valour or military service became knights, and admittance to the order of knighthood was a valued object.

Knighthood is essentially an institution of the days of chivalry. The latter word has itself an affinity with horsemanship, and knights bachelor all equites aurati (golden spurred horsemen). The Roman knight was equus "a horseman," and his rank was Eques, next below the Senatorial. In other countries, the ranks answering to our knights bachelor indicate by their names their original occupation as military equestrians, hence the German reiter, the French chevalier, &c. The Germans however, have another appellation, Knecht, from which our own word knight is derived.

The martial kings of the Franks used to give arms, with many solemnities, to their sons and others, and to gird them with a sword, and our own King Alfred, when he made his nephew Athelstane a knight, gave him a scarlet mantle set with precious stones, and a Saxon sword with a golden scabbard. Further on in the course of time, we find the ceremony of investiture assuming a solemnly religious character, including previous confession and absolution, vigils in the church, &c. And after the gospel according to Ingulphus, who flourished shortly before the Norman invasion, "the priest was to put the sword, being previously blessed, upon the knight's neck, with his benediction," and thus, after he had heard mass again and received the sacrament, he became a lawful knight.

still more elaborate discussion. The question is not who is above it but who is below it; for the highest in the land is proud of being a true gentleman, and it was regarded as the highest compliment ever paid to King George IV. when, as Prince Regent, he was called "the first gentleman in Europe." But if the true gentleman stand at so exalted an elevation, the assumption of the word has become so common as to have marred its meaning which strictly speaking is the gentility conferred by the lawful bearing of arms, and is in that sense equivalent to the word nobleman. One not improbable derivation of the word gentleman is, that towards the decline of the Roman empire there were two companies of particularly distinguished soldiers, mostly of good families, one of these were called Gentiles, the other Sentarii, and it has been suggested that the titles gentleman and esquire may have been derived from this. Again, it is surmised that gentleman means descent from gentle lineage, to which Selden adds that it is necessary he should follow the example of that lineage.

Solicitors, and persons in sundry other positions, are personally entitled to the addendum of "gentleman" to their names—an honour which few care to contend for, while fewer still would care to see "gent" written at the end of their names. The words "esquire" and "gentleman" have become so hackneyed, that though in their intrinsic acceptation they are highly honourable, yet as popularly written, each one is literally—nominis umbra—the shadow of a name. The following, however, may be accepted as a direct definition of the relations of gentlemen, as between each other—

"The chief of the family takes place of any gentleman of the family, and though generally it be believed that gentlemen have no precedence one from another, yet reason and discretion allow that a gentleman of three generations should cede to a gentleman of ten, if there be not a very great disparity between their fortunes, and for the same reason that a gentleman of three generations claims precedence from any ordinary landed man who has newly acquired his lands."

MEMBERS OF THE CLERICAL, NAVAL, MILITARY, LEGAL AND MEDICAL PROFESSIONS, AND OF SOME OTHER CLASSES,

Have among themselves certain relative rank that is peculiar to each class; but, when associating together, the precedence is mostly of a local character, and being arbitrary, it does not give a defined position to any person who is excluded from the recognised "Table of Precedence."

CITIZENS AND BURGLESSES.

Camden tells us that these "are such as in their own city perform any public function, or fill any particular office, or by election have a room in our High Court of Parliament." But that description must now be considerably enlarged, and practically the name is applied to all freemen and electors.

FOREIGN TITLES.

Foreign titles borne by British subjects afford their holders no precedence whatever in this country, and, strictly speaking, a royal license should be obtained for their use. It should also be borne in mind that foreign titles cannot always be valued in comparison with English ones according to their nominal rank, but their relative value has to be judged by the fact whether their possessors belong to the nobles majores or nobles minores (see "Nobility") of their respective countries.

Foreign authorities generally assume that titular distinction accompanied by an hereditary seat in the Diet or Parliament constitutes high nobility, and in France and Germany this is practically co-extensive with the ducal houses only. In England, however, the nobles majores (or high nobility) are co-extensive with the whole peerage (dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts and barons), such having an hereditary seat in the Upper House. It, therefore, follows that only those families of the high nobility abroad such as the herzogs and a few landgraves in Germany, and in France the dukes and two or three of the feudatory comtes can claim our peerage (dukes to barons) as equals in titular distinction, while the marquises in France and the margraves and grafs of the Empire in Germany—if the latter are the titular chiefs of their families—are equal to our rank of baronet, the next rank (but without parliamentary seat) in England below the peerage, further, the nobles minores of Germany and France, varying between in France the rank of comte to that of baron or plaisir ecuyer gentilhomme, and in Germany the grafs of the new Empire down to and including the freiherrn (by courtesy) and herr vons, rank according to the antiquity of their families with the families in England who are also of the nobles minores (knights, esquires and gentlemen).

FORMAL MODES OF ADDRESSING PERSONS OF TITLE.

CORRECTNESS in addressing a person of title, or one holding high office, can only be attained by first discovering what is his, or her, precise social rank, or his official position. As the name of every individual referred to in the two classes indicated appears in Debrett's Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionage, there will be no difficulty in obtaining the requisite information. It must always be remembered that clerical, naval, and military prefixes are written before other titles, that initials indicative of distinction are written after the title or name, and that a High Officer of State or an official holding an important office, should be addressed by his official title when the communication refers to official business.

* A Widow who re-marries loses any title or precedence she gained by her previous marriage. Society, however, from pure motives of courtesy, sanctions the retention of former rank, and with one exception permits ladies who have re-married to be addressed as though their titled husbands were living. The exception is that of the widow of an Honourable, who is not permitted even by courtesy to retain after re-marriage the prefix gained through her first husband. But, officially a widow who remarries is not recognised as having any claim to bear the title of her deceased husband, e.g. — at a coronation, or other State ceremonial, the widow of a peer would not be summoned as a peeress if she had subsequently married a commoner; and, if having espoused a peer of lesser degree than her former husband, she would only be recognised by the rank acquired by her last marriage.

Elders Sons of Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls bearing courtesy titles, strictly speaking, should not be styled "Rt Hon" unless themselves Peers or Members of the Privy Council.

Administrators.—As Governor.

Albert Medal.—Recipients of the Albert medal are permitted to place the initials "A.M." after their names.

Ambassador (British).—LETTERS.—Superscription, "To His Excellency (in other respects according to his rank), H. B. Dean—LETTERS—Superscription, "The Very Rev the Dean of —" Commencement, "Very Rev Sir" Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, Very Rev Sir, Your most obedient servant" PERSONAL ADDRESS, "Sir"

Divorced Ladies—When a lady is divorced she loses any title or precedence which she gained by marriage and should resume her maiden surname and precedence, with the prefix "Mrs" if the daughter of a commoner. With regard to divorced Peeresses, the College of Arms, acting on an opinion of the Lord Chancellor, has long held that such persons cannot claim the privileges or status of Peeresses which they derived from their husbands. Divorced Peeresses are not summoned to a Coronation as Peeresses. The above remarks apply to ladies who have divorced their husbands as well as to those who have been divorced

Dowager Lady is addressed according to her rank. Immediately a peer, or a baronet, marries, the widow of the previous incumbent of the title becomes "Dowager." This prefix, however, is not generally appreciated, and during the last five-and-thirty years it has been very much less used than formerly. It is well that the change is rapidly taking place, because confusion constantly occurs when there are two or more "Dowagers" in the same family, unless, according to their seniority, they be respectively termed "Dowager Dowager," or "Dowager Dowager Dowager." It is therefore recommended that each Dowager be addressed by her Christian name, as, "The Right Hon [Mary] Countess of —", etc., etc., if a peeress (less formally, the "Rt Hon. — is omitted), or, as Ellen, Lady —", if a Baronet's widow. At a Coronation, however, the summons to it is in the form "[Mary] Countess Dowager of —" But the word "Dowager" should never be used except the lady addressed is either mother, step-mother, or grandmother, of the present peer or baronet.

Duchess.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "To Her Grace, the Duchess of ———" Commencement, "Madam" Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, Madam, Your Grace's most humble and most obedient servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "Your Grace" [See also "Duke's Widow," and for "Duchess of the Blood Royal" see "Princess"]

Duke.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "To His Grace, the Duke of ———" Commencement, "My Lord Duke" Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, my Lord Duke, Your Grace's most devoted and most obedient servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "Your Grace." [For "Duke of the Blood Royal" see "Prince."]]

Duke's Daughter.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "Lady [Henrietta]" Commencement, "Madam" Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, Madam, Your Ladyship's most obedient and humble servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "My Lady," or "Your Ladyship."

* If the daughter of a Duke, a Marquess, or an Earl marry a Peer she is addressed according to the rank of her husband, and if she marry the eldest son of a Duke or Marquess she is known by her husband's courtesy title as also is the daughter of an Earl marrying an Earl's eldest son, but if the daughter of a Duke or Marquess marry the eldest son of an Earl she is sometimes addressed by the courtesy title of her husband, but more usually the husband's courtesy title (never his surname) is used with the prefix of Lady, thus—Lady Helen Stavordele.

During the past few years a practice has arisen of styling the daughters of Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls, as "The Lady [Henrietta]" but there is no authority for this use of "the," which is presumably an abbreviation for "The Rt Hon," a designation which obviously they are not entitled to Duke's Eldest Son, assumes by courtesy the second title of his father, and is addressed personally as if he were a Peer.

Duke's Eldest Son's Daughter is by courtesy addressed as if her father were a Peer PREDECESSORS—Sir Alexander Gibson, a famous lawyer, was Lord President of the Court of Session in Scotland, and certain steps were taken with a view to creating him a baronet of Nova Scotia but the patent is not on record. His son Alexander, a zealous Covenanter, was knighted in 1641, and appointed Lord Clerk Registrar. In 1646 he was constituted a Lord of Session, with the title of Lord Durie, an office of which he was deprived by Cromwell. Of him it is related that while he was riding upon Leith Sands, a nobleman who was a suitor in the Scotch Courts caused him to be forcibly carried away to prevent his voting at the decision of the suit in the Court of Session.
